

AUDIT REVEALS AUTO LICENSE FUND SHORTAGE

$1,683.90 Is Missing According to Report Made to Governor Walker by Sam J. Slate.

SHORTAGE COVERS YEARS 1923 AND 1924

Secretary McLendon Expresses Full Confidence in C. A. Cook, Head of Department.

A shortage of $1,683.90 in accounts of the automobile license tag department in the secretary of state's office is disclosed in an audit covering the years of 1923 and 1924, made public Monday afternoon by Sam J. Slate, state auditor.

The shortage consists of $414.15, which occurred in 1923, and $1,269.75 of 1924. It is shown by a discrepancy between the automobile register, which shows tags in this amount sold, but which are not covered on the cash book. The auditor, in reporting this discrepancy, states that the items have been checked three times, both by the state auditing forces and by the bookkeeper for the tag department, and neither are able to find any accounting for this amount, although record of sales and applications for licenses are on file. The report praises the neat and accurate bookkeeping system and compliments the bookkeeping force.

"All daily cash reports for the year were compared with the record of receipts shown on cash book and cash book footings verified," the audit states.

With the exceptions noted, the report declares all licenses purchased as taken from purchase invoices for tags were either recorded in the cash book or accounted for as unsold.

McLendon's Statement

Secretary of State S. Guy McLendon Monday night said that while he had not yet had an opportunity to officially examine the auditor's report, the shortage had been discussed with him privately. The report was handed to him, he said, just as he was leaving his office Monday afternoon and he would not say what action would be taken until he had opportunity to study it carefully. He pointed out, however, that Charles A. Cook, head of the division where the shortage occurred, is under $5,000 bond.

"It is significant," said Secretary McLendon, "that the second shortage, in 1924, covers exactly 100 automobile license tags. There can be no doubt that these tags were sold for there is an individual name on each of the office for each one, with the stamped notation that each one was paid for."

"I am inclined to surmise that the bookkeeper in making up his totals," tags sold on some busy day, just overlooked a bundle of one hundred and, in the rush, Mr. Cook accepted the bookkeeper's tags without checking his cash. If this is the case there would be a surplus of over $1,200. I cannot explain why the surplus is not to be found."

"However," concluded Secretary McLendon, "I have every confidence in Mr. Cook. He has held the same position for many years and no one who knows him will believe that he has actually taken this money."

"Missing" Tags Listed

Disposition of license tags and badges for the year 1923 shows approximately 290 tags and licenses on the automobile register as unsold and not accounted for as on hand, while in 1924 there were about 250 missing in like manner.

"This condition is commented upon," says Auditor Slate in his report, "to demonstrate that there is room for improvement in accounting for tags in their movement through the office and in the storage of old tags at the close of the year, until examined by the auditor."

Mr. Slate also condemns the practice of selling numbers out of order.

Ex-Governor Asks To Serve McCray Term

Chase Osborn, Millionaire of Michigan and Georgia, Makes Plea to Coolidge.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, January 4.—Chase S. Osborn, millionaire, former governor of Michigan, and now living in south Georgia, is asking President Coolidge to parole former Governor Warren McCray, of Indiana, from the Atlanta penitentiary, offered to take the place of the prisoner and serve out his sentence.

Mr. Osborn was actuated to make the appeal by his friendship for Mrs. McCray and her brother, George Ade. He admitted tonight that he had told the president he would be glad to take McCray's place in prison.

"I meant every word of what I told the president," said Mr. Osborn. "I have nothing to do. I have no dependents. I am used to more hardship than a prison entails. I am a pretty fair plate printer. I have been working at the printing trade all my life since starting on the Chicago Tribune when a youngster."

The president took Mr. Osborn's appeal under advisement.

STATE OFFICIALS POSTPONE COTTON CONFERENCE HERE

Death of One Agricultural Commissioner and Illness of Another Is Given as Reason.

MEETING PLANNED BY WANNAMAKER

Cotton Association Head Says Members Will Convene Today—Calls Washington Convention.

Last-minute cancellation of a conference called by commissioners of agriculture of southern states looking to reduction of American cotton acreage by one third, was announced Monday night by J. M. Moore, Alabama commissioner of agriculture.

Mr. Moore acted on authority of Harry D. Wilson, of the Louisiana agricultural commission, president of the organization which called the conference. He stated the cancellation to an indefinite future date was due to the sudden illness of Commissioner Wilson and the death last week of Commissioner B. Harris, of South Carolina.

Cotton Association Meets.

On receipt of news of cancellation of the conference at his home in St. Matthews, S. C., J. S. Wannamaker, president of the American Cotton Association, stated that members of his organization will meet in Atlanta today. He added that immediately after the meeting of American Cotton Association members, a call will be issued for all agricultural organizations to meet in Washington "to place American agriculture on the same basis it occupies in Europe."

In his official announcement, postponing the meeting to an indefinite date, Commissioner Moore pointed out that Commissioner Wilson had started on his journey, but was taken ill in New Orleans and was unfit to travel further. Commissioner G. W. Koiner, of Virginia, who is vice president of the organization, also was unable to be present.

Reduction of Acreage

The meeting had been called for the purpose of discussing methods to enable southern farmers to reduce their principal crop, cotton, by one-third.

Following issuance of the call by Commissioner Wilson, Mr. Wannamaker, president of the American Cotton Association, announced that his organization would take part in the meeting.

Meeting Postponed.

The formal announcement of postponement of the meeting follows: "Owing to the illness of Hon. Harry D. Wilson, commissioner of agriculture of Louisiana, who is president of the Southern Association of Agriculture, and who called the meeting of commissioners to be held in Atlanta, January 3, and further on account of the death of Hon. B. Harris, commissioner of agriculture of South Carolina, I, acting Commissioner Wilson, hereby declare the meeting postponed, to be called at a later date."

Columbia, S. C., January 4.—(AP)—Following a call for a meeting in Atlanta tomorrow, the American Cotton Association will issue a call to all other agricultural organizations in the

NO ACTION TAKEN ON I. C. C. NOMINEES

Traffic League Governors Leave Members Free to Act on Woodlock and Taylor Nominations

The board of governors of the Southern Traffic League decided Monday to take no action on the nominations of Thomas F. Woodlock, of New York, and Richard V. Taylor, of Mobile, to be members of the interstate commerce commission.

The league left the individuals free to do what each member might wish for himself so long as the league was not obligated.

The following statement was issued by Charles E. Cotterill, of Atlanta, a member of the board of governors: "At a meeting of the board of governors of the Southern Traffic League held in Atlanta today concerning the appointments of Richard V. Taylor and Thomas F. Woodlock to membership on the interstate commerce commission."

GEN. PERSHING RESIGNS SOON

Appointment of Successor As Chairman of Tacna-Arica Commission Under Consideration.

PERSHING IS DUE TO SAIL HOME SOON

Officials at Washington Resent Intimation His Resignation Is Due to Anything Except Health

BUCHANAN NAMED MAYOR PRO TEM

Mayor's Committees Are Surprise—Reestablishes Firemasters; Hartsfield Heads Police.

Washington, January 4.—Formal resignation of General John J. Pershing as chairman of the Tacna-Arica plebiscitary commission, and the appointment of a successor, will be announced soon by President Coolidge. Under terms of the Coolidge award there is no provision for a vice chairman in the absence of the chairman.

To permit Pershing to return to the United States from Arica, Chile, for an indefinite period—and perhaps permanently—it is imperative that a new chairman be appointed. It is understood the president and Secretary Kellogg have already given consideration to the names of possible successors.

Sails After January 15

It is not believed, however, that Pershing can leave Arica before January 15, and it is expected he will sail on the cruiser Denver. Ambassador Mathieu, of Chile, who is returning to Santiago from Washington to become minister of foreign affairs, will reach Arica today. He is a personal friend of Pershing, he is anxious to discuss with the general the work of the commission.

In any event, it is said, Pershing would not return until after his recovery was assured and also until he had cleared up a great many matters, now awaiting attention, in connection with the battle monument commission here.

When Pershing was first offered the appointment, it is said he declined, pointing out to the president that his health, undermined during his Philippine campaigns and by subsequent exposure during the world war, was such that he would stand a protracted strain in a semi-tropical climate. Then, however, it was believed the work of the Tacna-Arica commission could be ended within two or three months and on that theory he accepted.

Though there is real concern among informed Washington officials over Pershing's health, there also was unquestionably a feeling of satisfaction that it will be possible for the president and Kellogg personally to discuss with him the entire Tacna-Arica situation.

Appointment of Pershing's successor may be made as soon as definite word is received from Arica as to his date of departure. He would then be able to start south for his post as quickly as possible, and thus reduce the period in which there will be no chairman on duty.

Pershing's own reluctance to return to the United States until his work at Arica is satisfactorily finished is well known. He has been a devoted and successful plebiscitary chairman. Despite the manifold difficulties of the position, Pershing has enjoyed the work thoroughly and became intensely interested in seeing it brought to a successful conclusion.

Whether Pershing will ever return to Arica as chairman of the commission depends entirely upon the report of his physicians when he arrives in America and his own disposition. Officials in Washington are exceedingly enthusiastic in seeing that Pershing's illness is in no sense a "diplomatic sickness," and point out that such a statement is most unfair and untrue.

Pershing's Jaw Injured

Pershing is suffering from an oral infection of the jaw which became more serious ten days ago, and in the opinion of his physicians in Arica, was caused by a blow to the jaw while he was in the line.

When he landed in length, Berlin handed his license to McCormick, clerk gave it a hasty glance, registered surprise, but went rapidly over the routine ceremony. Two bureau attendants served as witnesses. Berlin turned to his bride, took her in his arms and kissed her. He wore a plain business suit. His bride had not taken the time to register.

Man Rushing To Sick Wife Dies Under Car

G. W. Elrod, of Gainesville, Killed When Car Runs Off Highway.

Mount Airy, Ga., January 4.—(Special.)—G. W. Elrod, of Gainesville, was almost instantly killed last night between 10 and 10:30 o'clock when the car which he was driving ran off a fill a short distance from town. He was blinded by the light of an approaching freight train and could not see how near he was to the fill, it is said.

His brother-in-law, a Mr. Wiley, was pinned under the car with him until about 8 o'clock this morning before he could attract the attention of anyone.

Wiley was suffering from several broken ribs. A steady rain falling all night added to his misery. Several cars passed during the night but he could not hail them, he said.

Mr. Elrod was rushing to the bedside of his wife, who is ill, when he was killed.

Wiley was taken to a nearby house where first aid was given, afterwards being removed to Camilla.

Hailbrook and brother, undertakers, of Cornelia, went for the body of Mr. Elrod.

Recommendation that a $500,000 bond issue be floated this year for "urgent municipal improvements," without specifying any particular allocation for any specific purpose; a demand that the water rate be reduced immediately; and an urgent appeal to council to match the gift of Jacob Elsas of $100,000 for erection of a pay ward at Grady hospital, were features of Mayor Walter Sims' annual message at the organization meeting Monday night of the 1926 city council.

Reduction of the Personnel of City Council from 36 to 12 Members and a New Site for Battle Hill Sanitarium Also Were Advocated

Buchanan Mayor Pro Tem.

Alderman Claude E. Buchanan, veteran representative from the eighth ward, was elected mayor pro tem by unanimous vote and Alderman J. Allen Couch was elected provisional mayor pro tem without opposition.

"I will endeavor to deal fairly," said Alderman Buchanan acknowledging the honor. Alderman Couch made a brief speech thanking his colleagues. Just prior to adjournment of the 1925 council, a handsome gold watch was presented Alderman W. B. Hartsfield, retiring mayor pro tem, on behalf of his colleagues. Alderman Hartsfield made an appropriate response.

Committee Surprise.

The greatest surprise of the session developed during the reading of his committee assignments by Mayor Sims, who announced appointment of Alderman William B. Hartsfield as chairman of the 1926 police committee. There had been practically unanimous opinion voiced up to the last minute around city hall that this important post would go to Alderman Buchanan. The surprise was given by the chairman. Continuation of Mayor Sims' police department policies during the year was seen, however, in the selections of the committee. All of the five members—Aldermen Hartsfield and Buchanan and Councilmen Cooper, Osburn and Barrett—were regular supporters of administration policies.

The second surprise came when the mayor, in reading his appointments, let it be known that he had declined the board of firemasters, a board which the mayor himself had declined to recognize a year ago because he believed there was no necessity for such a body in view of the code providing for appointment of a fire committee. The effect of restoring this board will be to give the mayor a voice on all affairs pertaining to the fire department, which is granted him by the city charter. He was deprived of such powers while only a fire committee functioned.

Guy Dobbs will succeed himself as chairman of the board.

JAZZ CLOTHING FOR MEN PASSE IN FALL STYLES

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 4.—(AP)—Men dress far better today than they did five years ago, George W. Herrmann, of New York, president of the International Association of Clothing Designers, said today at the annual convention of the association.

"Women will no longer monopolize color in clothing, but the so-called jazz clothing—wild stuff like Oxford bags—is now out of date and next fall will be a thing of the past," he said.

"The will of trousers is receding to a marked degree. For youths, a 19-inch knee, with about 17 1/2 inches at the bottom, and for more conservative men a 18 1/2-inch knee, with about 16 1/2 inches at the bottom, seems the trend for next fall. Broad shoulders and a trim waist fit also will be features of the coming styles."

FAITH AND LOEHR SPEEDER'S VICTIM NAMED ALDERMEN DIES AT HOSPITAL

Officials Succeed J. L. Carpenter, Who Died Recently, and Dr. W. B. Duvall, Who Resigned.

Two vacancies on the aldermanic board were filled by city council Monday and the newly-elected members immediately took the oath of office and received recognition at the hands of Mayor Sims in selection of his 1926 council committees.

John Faith, well known citizen and retired man, of 141 First Shoals avenue, was elected unanimously by the 1925 council to fill the seat made vacant by the sudden death last week of J. L. Carpenter, alderman from the eleventh ward.

Loehr Is Elected.

H. T. Loehr, prominent in railroad brotherhood circles, and a conductor on the Southern railroad, living at 312 Simpson street, was elected unanimously by the 1926 city council to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. W. B. Duvall, alderman from the first ward.

Mr. Loehr was nominated by the first ward delegation composed of Councilmen Robert F. Pennington and S. A. Wardlaw. He was in attendance and immediately took his oath of office and was escorted to his seat.

The eleventh ward delegation in council, Councilman Leo Sudderth and Councilman W. R. Johnson, joined in presenting Faith's name. He will serve until the next regular city election the first Wednesday in December, when a successor will be named to fill the then remaining two years of the late Mr. Carpenter's term. Mr. Faith announced he would be a candidate at that time.

East Atlanta Pioneer.

Mr. Faith, who is 56 years of age, is in the real estate business and is a pioneer of East Atlanta. At the time the Faith school was built some 20 years ago he donated the site and was the first to subscribe to the fund to erect the structure.

City council paid impressive tribute to the memory of Mr. Carpenter by adopting by standing vote resolutions expressing sympathy to the family.

MANY INCREASES IN WAGES KILLED BY 1925 COUNCIL

Raises of $35 for Police, and Hikes for Men Making Between $100 and $200 Lost.

COURTS TO DECIDE IN FIREMEN'S CASE

Recent Increases of $10 for Police and Firemen, However, Are Unaffected by Action.

Salary increases approximating $35 a month each for members of the Atlanta police department as well as an ordinance nonconcurrent in by the aldermanic board seeking to increase salaries of all city employees making between $100 and $200 a month in amounts ranging from 10 to 15 per cent of their present salaries, were definitely killed by the 1925 city council at its last session Monday afternoon. At the same time council declined to give its approval to $35 per month increase for firemen authorized at a recent referendum and now under injunction in the courts.

This, however, in no way affects the $10 flat increase for policemen and firemen voted by council two months ago, which became operative January 1.

The mayor's veto of a resolution seeking to give policemen $35 a month increase, bringing the pay of privates to $175 a month, was sustained.

Conference Committee Fails.

When a conference committee of three aldermen and three councilmen, named to adjust the adverse action of the aldermanic board with regard to raising salaries of city employees generally, reported it was hopelessly tied, 3 to 3, the measure was declared automatically defeated.

Council voted 15 to 14 in favor of filing an ordinance by Alderman Couch adopted at the last meeting seeking to put into effect salary increases approximating $35 a month for the city firemen. This action came after Mayor Sims had sent council a communication declaring he was returning the ordinance "without his approval or disapproval" on the grounds that certain citizens had obtained a temporary restraining order in the courts against payment of the salaries as ratified at a public referendum.

Answering questions by Alderman Couch, City Attorney James L. Mayson advised that in event the mayor failed to approve or disapprove a measure within the allotted period, it was a technical veto.

"Would this council be in contempt of court if it approved this paper in view of the court action?" asked Mr. Couch.

"It is my judgment this body would not," said Mr. Mayson. "The court proceedings now merely to enjoin payment of the money."

Moves for Passage.

Alderman Couch moved that the paper be passed notwithstanding the veto. Councilman John A. White promptly countered by offering a substitute that the paper be filed.

Council's action in voting, by a 15 to 14 vote, was sustained.

Ex-Kaiser Charges England With Failure of House's Peace Mission in 1914

Former German Emperor Again Blames England and France for Great World War—Declares France Should Have Joined Germany in Support of Peace Policy.

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution, by North American Newspaper Alliance.)
BY GEORGE SLYESTER VIERICK.

This is the third of a series of authorized interviews with the ex-kaiser, designed to bring out his interpretation of the facts in some of the recent fundamental historical controversies regarding the World War. His viewpoint, although frankly partisan, is interesting and has a large historical value. In order to insure the accuracy of the correspondence, the transcription of his conversation with the ex-kaiser, the manuscript was submitted to William II. and was personally corrected by him.

Doorn, Holland, January 4.—(Special.)—The visit of Colonel House to Berlin and London in the spring of 1914, Emperor William remarked to me at Doorn, "almost prevented the World War. It would have rendered the catastrophe impossible, if the London foreign office had been as receptive to the plan of President Wilson as I was in Berlin."

"Colonel House was the unofficial ambassador of President Wilson. He came to me with a letter from Mr. Wilson. I welcomed his efforts. Having done my share to keep the peace of Europe for a quarter of a century, I was the last monarch in the world to ignore a plan likely to assure that for which I had striven. The plan commanded my attention especially because it was based upon the idea of maintaining the peace of the world and safeguarding white civilization by cooperation among the great Germanic nations, Germany, the United States and Great Britain."

This conversation took place in the library of the exiled German emperor at Doorn. The room is full of fascinating mementoes, including the head of a prehistoric Egyptian queen, mother-in-law of Tutankhamen, and a water-color sketch of the kaiser as a small boy by the side of his grand mother, Queen Victoria. The walls are lined with books, mostly of political nature. The former monarch is almost buried by an avalanche of books and clippings sent to him by friends from every quarter of the globe, a great number from America. Every book and every clipping bearing on the world war and world politics receives careful attention.

Kaiser Says Wood.

The emperor's interests are many. His mind is more agile than ever. He hopes wood and he discusses theology.

NEW SAFETY COUNCIL HEAD TO BE INSTALLED

J. E. Skaggs, president of the South-eastern Express company, is to be installed as president of the Atlanta Safety Council at its regular meeting Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock at the hotel.

Not realizing this, House urged Sir Edward Grey to go to Kiel for the German regatta week. Grey could take up the great topic with the emperor himself. Grey was chilly. He and his colleagues were not to be lured by Wilson into any such atmosphere. The consternation that must have ensued at Paris were Grey found at the Kiel regatta may be imagined. The mere mention of such a thing, so London said, would throw Paris and St. Petersburg into a swoon.

"It was official England that gave the finishing blow to the Wilsonian proposition voiced by Colonel House. Consider that the colonel wrote to Page when the war broke out: 'It's a bad business. And just think how near we came to making a catastrophe impossible. If England had moved a little faster and had let me go back to Germany, the thing, perhaps, could have been avoided. If only England had received the Wilson proposals as heartily as Germany did.'"

Comment on "War Guilt." Emperor William concluded: "The war guilt lie, upon which the treaty of Versailles is built, may, accordingly, be demolished by the corroborative testimony of Wilson's envoy, Colonel House. How impressive is the circumstance that in the world war, notwithstanding, Wilson went over to England, which had repudiated his plan, and sided against Germany, which had embraced it!"

This analysis is especially interesting in view of the recent publication by Viscount Grey, of Faldoon, of the secret memorandum drafted by him and Colonel House which embodied President Wilson's peace plans, formulated in February, 1916. Viscount Grey showed this memorandum to Britain but withheld its existence from all other allies.

In his memoirs Lord Grey unwittingly lets the cat out of the bag by divulging the real secret motives that impelled France to go to war. He says: "We were unable to come to a peaceful understanding, as France's real motive in fighting was the reconquest of Alsace-Lorraine."

The kaiser's deduction is that Viscount Grey twice frustrated President Wilson's attempt to secure the peace of the world. He says, "I believe that neither the kaiser, nor Bethmann-Hollweg, Jagow, planned or desired war."

"How different would the course of history have been if Viscount Grey had seen eye to eye with President Wilson and William II?" asks the kaiser.

(Tomorrow: Kaiser believes there is a secret alliance between England and America.)

Atlanta University President To Speak At Gammon Seminary

Dr. M. W. Adams, president of Atlanta university, will be principal speaker at the Founder's day exercises of Gammon Theological seminary to be held in Thirkield hall at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The subject will be "The Place of Theological Education in the Building of a Race," and the occasion is in memory of the birth of Elijah I. Gammon, of Maine, who provided funds for establishment of Gammon seminary for training negro ministers.

In commenting on the shortage shown in the accounts of the automobile license tag department, Mr. Slate said that he did not feel that any member of the departmental staff had been guilty of actual theft.

"I cannot believe that any of the permanent employees would be guilty of theft," he said, "but, of course, the records speak for themselves, and it is merely my duty to report on the records as I find them."

In a statement given The Constitution Monday night, Mr. Cook said: "Mr. Slate and I have discussed the shortage of 100 tags, but no irregularity was found in the bookkeeping. In my department, at the time of the loss there were more than 7,000 tags lying unprotected in my office and any unscrupulous person in the state could have walked in and carried that many or more away without it being discovered."

"We have no way of checking how the tags were taken out through the books, and everything in the bookkeeping department has been found in perfect order," Mr. Cook continued. "I have not seen Mr. Slate's report and I can give no definite statement until I have discussed the matter more fully with him."

Mr. Slate, in his recommendations, says: "Parties issuing tags should be held responsible and sign receipts for them when delivered from storage. At night arrangements should be made to place tags in office under lock and key. When daily sales reports are certified by bookkeeper any omission of numbers should be immediately called to the attention of the chief clerk. He should investigate the matter and save what same are sold the following day."

"Each day's cash should be balanced by both mail order and window department, either at the close of business or on the following morning. In the window department during the rush season there should be a head cashier whose only duty would be to prepare daily sales reports and deposits, also to balance the cashier's receipts against applications. Each cashier should turn in separate at close of business the day's receipts, less a stated amount for change and same be balanced against applications stamped with his or her mark. Under this condition should the head cashier accept the day's receipts from other cashiers until same have been added by him."

Changes are favored. "The figure then be proven and balanced by him the following morning. Under this method responsibility can be placed for any shortage and in a modified form is the same method used by banks."

Charles A. Cook is in charge of the window sales department of the auto tag department, while R. L. Miller is in charge of the mail order division. A. T. Harris is chief clerk in the secretary of state's office. All are under bond, Mr. Harris for $2,000 and the other two for $5,000 each.

Other departments of the secretary of state's office are shown by the audit to be functioning in proper manner and the report shows a highly creditable record for the office as a whole, it is pointed out.

Governor Clifford Walker was not in the city Monday, having gone to Waycross to deliver a speech. Whether or not any further action regarding the report shortage will be taken could not be determined, it was said, until after his return. Under the law the audit must be reported to the legislature and any steps indicated as desirable would be made according to his discretion.

NUMEROUS ROBBERIES REPORTED TO POLICE

Four burglaries were reported to police Monday night in addition to a number during the day.

Miss M. Sheffield, of 61 Forrest avenue, lost a pocketbook from her apartment. The purse contained $25 in money and a gold watch. A woman's wrist watch and a string of pearls with a white gold clasp, set with a diamond were stolen from the apartment of L. C. Leonard, 420 North Boulevard.

L. F. Sweet, of 167 Blue Ridge avenue, asked police to search for two suitcases containing a quantity of clothing, stolen from his automobile which was parked at Forsyth near Luckie street.

Caswell Robbed. J. M. Caswell, of 607 Piedmont avenue, reported the theft of a suit of clothes, a top coat, an overcoat and a shirt from his room. Detective J. J. Chester was assigned to the case.

Several robberies and attempted robberies were reported to the police over the week-end.

After being knocked down by a footpad, Emmett Scott, 20, was relieved of $2 and left lying on the pavement at Pryor street and Ridge avenue until he was discovered by passersby and rushed to Grady hospital for first aid late Sunday night.

Hoke Pitts, of 233 Tulin street, fired his pistol and frightened away a negro burglar after the latter had struck him in the face. The burglar was attempting to enter the rear of Mr. Pitts' home. After the encounter, Mr. Pitts pursued the burglar for some distance.

A suitcase belonging to Miss Ethel Drewry and bearing a State Normal school seal was stolen from an automobile parked at Peters and Forsyth streets. W. Y. Carter, 431 Gordon street, notified police of the theft of an overcoat from his home.

Minister Seeks To Avoid Trial In State Courts

Rev. O. H. Greenwell, former head of a local congregation, Monday was making every effort to escape prosecution after being brought back to Atlanta from Orlando, Fla., by Bert Donaldson, special investigator of Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office.

The preacher was trying to convince four Atlantans that he was not guilty of larceny after trust in connection with his alleged failure to pay loan associations certain money said to have been entrusted to him for that purpose. He was indicted on four counts charging larceny.

Donaldson went to Orlando in search of Mance Bray, who is charged with the murder of J. L. Arnold, aged nightwatchman of the Patterson Lumber company. After seeing a prisoner held there Donaldson decided the wrong man had been arrested.

Sunday morning he went to church and found Greenwell in charge of services. When Donaldson told the pastor that he was under arrest Greenwell remonstrated, saying it would "ruin the service if he were taken without first delivering the sermon he had prepared." Accordingly, Donaldson sat in the audience and after the sermon took charge of his prisoner.

Greenwell declared that he had authorized another man to pay the accounts and that this agent had failed to make payment. Alleged victims stated that if they were repaid they would not press the charges.

NAPIER TO RULE ON COLLECTION OF FI FA TAXES

Responsibility for the collection of fi fa taxes will probably be decided by an opinion from Attorney General George M. Napier in the case of Bibb county, it was expected at the capitol Monday. Attorney General Napier returned to his office Monday after a trip on official business to Florida and it was understood he would be asked for an opinion in the Bibb county case at once.

Usher Willett, tax collector of Bibb county, has reported to Comptroller General William A. Wright that he has issued fi fa against all uncollected taxes in the county, but when he turned them over to the sheriff for collection, the sheriff refused to accept them, stating that, under the salary system, the county commissioners had so reduced the personnel of his office that he hadn't sufficient force to do the work.

Comptroller General Wright, it is understood, agrees with the tax collector that it is the duty of the sheriff to collect the fi fas. This view is supported by an opinion, on file in the comptroller general's office from two Macon law firms. On the other hand, Walter DeFore, county attorney of Bibb, holds that tax collectors must collect the fi fas.

SOUTH GEORGIANS WOULD TURN PINE TIMBER INTO PAPER

B. M. Lufburrow, Georgia state forester, has recently completed a 12,000-mile inspection trip of south Georgia, and stated Monday that landowners whose timber is adapted to the production and conservation of slash pine, are deeply interested in the manufacture of paper from pulpwood, since the location of a pulpwood plant at Gordon, Ga.

Mr. Lufburrow was accompanied on his tour by Bonnell Stone, chairman of the executive committee of the state board of forestry, and both stated that the people of south Georgia consider the development of this new industry as bringing a potential gold mine to their front doors.

Associations are being organized all over south Georgia, it was said, for the promotion of scientific methods of forest culture and fire prevention.

Habersham County Is Leading State In Tax Collections

Despite the reported drought conditions in Habersham county, that county has made one of the best reports on collections of 1925 taxes of any in the state, it was announced Monday by William B. Harrison, tax clerk in the office of Comptroller General William A. Wright.

S. F. Wood, tax collector of Habersham, sent in $12,200 on Monday and now has only about $1,000 on his books uncollected, it was stated.

Comptroller General Wright wrote Mr. Wood stating that it was refreshing to get such a report from a county in the drought area, where many other counties were complaining of hard times and slow collections.

Tax Collector W. S. Richardson, of Fulton county, has sent in over a million dollars to credit to Fulton county on the tax digest, which charge to Fulton $1,572,794.45. The Fulton county collector has remitted $305,000 to the comptroller general in the past two weeks and, it is understood, has another large payment ready to be sent in.

MRS. THOMAS PETERS DIES IN BALTIMORE

News of the death in Baltimore Sunday of Mrs. Thomas W. Peters, widely-known woman, reached Atlanta Monday. Mrs. Peters and her husband formerly lived at Columbus, Ga., where Mr. Peters was connected with the Columbus Light and Power company. Mrs. Peters visited in Atlanta many times and has many friends here.

Funeral services were held in Baltimore Monday afternoon. Mr. Peters is now connected with the Potomac Edison company, of Baltimore.

SWITCHMAN LOSES ARM IN ACCIDENT

While attempting to couple a car, R. E. Foster, 38, a switchman in the employ of the Central of Georgia railroad, living on Ware street, East Point, had his left arm cut off near the shoulder. The accident occurred at Bryan crossing in East Point Sunday morning. Foster is said to have slipped and fallen in front of the moving car.

He was rushed to an Atlanta hospital. The injured man had been an employee of the railroad for 15 years.

GORE WOULD ADMIT ACCESSORY TO MURDER

Mell M. Gore, indicted jointly with Theodore R. Berry, now held prisoners in Fulton tower, and Jack Wilson, fugitive, on charges of murder in connection with the slaying of William H. Cheek, Peachtree road grocer, Monday stated that he is willing to plead guilty to being an accessory before the fact in the alleged murder, but said he would not plead guilty to charges of murder.

The prisoner, a Buckhead barber, is alleged to have entered the store with Wilson, who he declared did the actual shooting when Cheek is alleged to have failed to obey the orders of the pair as they prepared to rob the place.

A plea of guilty to being an accessory before or after the fact in a murder case carries with it the penalty of death in Georgia, it was pointed out, but Gore stuck to his first assertion, saying he would not plead guilty to a charge of murder.

Meanwhile the search for Wilson continues, as the trial of Gore and Berry is slated for January 14.

Ruby Jones, self-confessed lover of Wilson, still is held as a material witness and no charges have been preferred against her.

Accidents Show Increase In State Industrial Plant

During the year 1925 a total of 28,807 industrial accidents were reported to the Georgia industrial commission, as occurring in this state, it is shown by the auditors' report of the department, filed Monday afternoon in the governor's office.

This shows a slight increase over 1924, when 27,032 accidents were reported.

In 1925 the commission held hearings either before the full body or before individual commissioners, in 647 cases, compared to 420 in 1924. The commission, which is supported by assessment on insurance carriers writing workmen's compensation insurance in the state and those companies employing more than 10 people who accept the provisions of the act, received a total of $55,041.00 during 1925, while expenses were $32,820.97. In 1924 receipts were $44,728.06, against expenses of $15,126.51.

The secretary-treasurer, Sharpe

Jones, is bonded in the sum of $1,000. All receipts are deposited in the state treasury and are withdrawn upon requisition by warrant of the governor for the expenses of the commission.

In commenting upon the showing of the audit, State Auditor Sam J. Slate declares:

"An examination of the work of the industrial commission, administering the provisions of the workmen's compensation act for the year 1925, justifies the wisdom of this law."

After setting forth facts as found by the audit, Mr. Slate concludes his comment by saying:

"Books are well adapted for the purposes of the commission, and are kept in a neat and accurate manner by the secretary-treasurer."

There are three members of the industrial commission, Hal M. Stanley, commissioner of commerce and labor, ex-officio; L. J. Kilburn and R. C.

Norman, George M. Napier, attorney general, is also an ex-officio member, but does not receive any salary for his services, other than his salary as attorney general.

KING ASKS PROBE OF BANK SYSTEM

Washington, January 4.—(P)—Investigation of the federal banking system was proposed in the senate today by Senator King, democrat, Utah.

BRYAN-HATTON BUSINESS COLLEGE

We train you and place you in a position.

Staff any time. Life scholarship, day school, $175; night school, $25. Get our Free Booklet. It tells how. 154 Whitehall, N.Y. 8787, Atlanta, Ga.

King charged there was too close an association between some of the large banking interests and brokers and speculators. One result, he said, has been the financing of trusts and the placing upon the market of much "watered" stock which the public was asked to absorb.

Explaining his amendments, Senator King said one was designed to increase the membership of the reserve board from eight to nine, with the added member representing the state banks and trust companies, which are members of the board. National banks already are represented on the board by the comptroller of the currency.

Senator King declared that, unless the state banks and trust companies were placed on an equal footing with the national banks, the reserve system, they, as well as many national banks, would withdraw from the plan.

NOTED SONG WRITER MARRIES MISS MACKAY

move a light, tan-colored fur coat that concealed her street dress.

Return to Berlin's Home.

They went quickly to a waiting automobile and were driven to Berlin's home at 29 West 46th street, emerging from which, shortly afterward, they were beset by reporters.

"Have you notified the members of the family?" came the first question.

"I am very happy, but awfully frightened," returned Mrs. Berlin. "Yes, I've notified everybody."

"You have made me miss my train," said Berlin.

They were off in a moment, but in ten minutes the car came back, and the time they were surrounded by cameramen and reporters.

"I can't pose for you," said the composer. "I've got on my oldest clothes."

Berlin Changes Mind.

Then he changed his mind. "Oh darling!" he said to his bride, "we'd better get it all over with, and so they posed."

Berlin's oldest clothes were models of the latest style. And as for the bride, she was charming in a rose-colored duvety coat, a silk dress to match and a little rose velvet hat.

She carried a big handbag and kept the hand with its wedding ring safely in a pocket. A corsage bouquet of lilies of the valley was prominently in evidence.

Mounting all was not happy at 3 East 75th street, the Mackay town house.

When Clarence H. Mackay and his son, John W., drove up, they found a reception committee from the press. The senior Mackay was troubled and thoughtful.

Mackay Refuses Comment.

"Have you any statement to make regarding the marriage of your daughter?" he was asked.

"No, I have not," he said, very emphatically. "If you want any information, you will have to go to my office. I may make a statement tomorrow."

And here closed the actual facts of a day that has behind it all the romance of poverty and riches from two radically different sides of the picture.

In the days of the "Forty-niners," those pioneers who followed the glow of the setting sun to seek gold, John W. Mackay armed himself with pick and prospecting kit and sought the hills, gold came to him quickly.

He became one of the world's richest men. He came to New York, engaged with the elder (Gordon Bennett) in the laying of the commercial cables, and was a power in all things pertaining to money.

Widow Was Social Queen.

At his death, his widow became the social arbiter of things American at London, where for a quarter of a century she had ruled, with iron and golden hand, the upper crust of such part of Mayfair as Americans know.

And his son, Clarence, had married the beautiful Katherine Duer, daughter of one of the oldest families, socially, in all New York.

Their country estate at Roslyn, L. I., was one of the show places of the social world. For quick action, troubles came to them.

There landed at the Battery in 1892 a refugee, poor Jewish rabbi, who had brought his wife and eight children from Russia by various and dangerous paths.

The youngest of Rabbi Baline's flock was Izzy, a mere child. They came in time to live on a shabby Cherry street, where the old man found work at certifying kosher meat, the while every one of the family worked for bread.

Izzy, the child, sold papers in the streets.

Sings in Bowery Saloons.

He inherited from his cantor father a sweet little voice. He came to sing about the back rooms of Bowery saloons, in the days when the Bowery was a place of no kid glove atmosphere.

And in this age of gun-fighters, of tough men and strong drinkers, he came in time to be a singing waiter in Nigger Mike Salter's saloon in New York's Chinatown.

Nigger Mike, who was, formerly, a Russian Jew himself, was the chief fixer of his time. He it was who got the unlucky from the clutches of the police, and his wife was known far and wide. "Chuck" Connors hung out there.

Men and women came there to drink. A dingy room in the rear of the bar served for dancing.

And Berlin, then Izzy Baline, the active, earnest young waiter, would pause between singing here to imitate a drunken Dutchman and sing "Heinz, Heinz! What's the Matter With Heinz?" and other popular songs of the period.

Writes His First Song.

Izzy Baline was not destined to stay at Nigger Mike's. He moved next to Jimmy Kelly's place, on 14th street, where the business was a little better and the money bigger.

And then it was that the first of his songs came to the public—Marie From Sunny Italy.

It brought only 37 cents to the author, but it paved the way to fame and success. For he went next to work, and with some misgivings, for Snyder and company, popular song publishers. That was in 1909.

And since that time he has written hundreds of songs and his bank account has grown to such an extent that he could look Clarence Mackay in the eye, in an interview said to have taken place months ago over his attentions to his daughter, and talk with him in terms of millions.

Calls Mackay's Bluff.

"What will you do if I disinherit my daughter and pass my millions over to my daughter, Katherine?" Mackay is reported to have asked Berlin.

"In that event," said the song writer, "I will have to give her a couple of millions as a wedding present."

And Berlin could do it.

But he never held back the issue of his poor beginning. He was always helpful and kind to his own family and needy friends. He never looked askance at the rags over which he climbed.

In the days of his first prosperity, he married Dorothy Goetz, a sister of Ray Goetz, now prominent in composition himself. She died in 1913 and his last song, "When I Lost You," was written at the time of her demise.

History of His Songs.

Another of Berlin's successes, "All Alone," was popularly accepted, as dedicated to Constantine Parnidge after she returned to California and film work several years ago following a visit to New York on which she was frequently in his company. They were reported engaged, but neither would admit it.

His "What'll I Do" was said to have been written soon after Mackay first frowned on his daughter's romance with the song writer, while his latest song hit, "Remember," also was said to have been dedicated to Ellen.

Its crowning chorus runs: "Remember the night, the night we met"—alludes to a moonlit vista and a lovers' tryst and concludes: "But you forgot to remember."

Others of his best known productions include: "O, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning" played as a march on two continents during the world war, "Call Me Up Some Rainy Afternoon," "Everybody's Doing It," "When the Midnight Choo-Choo Leaves for Alabama," "My Harlem," "This is the Life," "He's a Rag Picker," "Say It With Music," "All By Myself," and "Some Sunny Day."

With few exceptions Berlin wrote both words and music.

Miss Mackay Seems Society.

Ellen Mackay but recently attracted wide attention by an article in a current publication, in which she said society girls sought cabaret entertainment because of the ordinary character of the young men who made up the dancing set provided by smart hostesses.

She had tasted society and found it insipid. And she came by her active views honestly, for her mother was one of the earliest figures in the suffrage fight, and she, too, found society a bore for one who had a bent for more serious things.

More than 30 years ago, W. S. Clark, 80, of Smith Centre, Kans., made a vow that he would not have his hair cut until William Jennings Bryan was in the president's chair.

The death of "I Commune," however, weakened his resolve, and a barber cut the hair that hung down to Mr. Clark's waist.

During the discussion of the affairs of the city for the coming year, the proposal to build a new city hall and a new grammar school building was discussed informally but no action was taken.

A city bond issue is being talked in Decatur to cover the erection of a city hall, a grammar school, additional water works, an addition to the junior high school.

The city commission for 1926 will be composed of Mayor Scott Candler, W. W. Froeborn, J. F. Ridley, J. R. Scott and R. C. Henderson.

Sam Small Named To Head Soldiers' Home Movement

The Rev. Sam Small, for many years special writer for The Constitution, in Washington, D. C. Monday was appointed chairman of the national soldiers' home committee of the Spanish war veterans and will represent this body when the veterans William D. Upshaw, of the fifth district of Georgia, introduces a bill providing for establishment of the home "in or near Atlanta."

Mr. Small is a veteran of the Spanish-American war, and held the rank of captain. He has been active in affairs of the veterans for years and is a member of an Atlanta veterans' organization.

The proposal for establishment of the national soldiers' home in Atlanta has been given the approval of leading members of congress and several congressmen to the home will be for veterans of all wars and will be the only national home in the south, it is said.

Spanish war veterans who are sponsoring the home here passed resolutions favoring the home at the 1924 convention held at Michigan City, Ind., and the matter was discussed again informally at the 1925 national meeting in St. Petersburg, Florida.

Governor W. P. Brandon, of Alabama, has given his endorsement to the proposal and has declared that he will ask the Alabama delegation in congress to support the bill.

John Candler, past commander of the Fitzhugh camp No. 6, of Atlanta, recently has been in communication with Governor Brandon and has been assisting in the support of the executive, it is said.

Mr. Upshaw has been selected to present the bill in congress and the Georgia delegation will be asked to assist in its passage, Samuel C. Crane, secretary of the Spanish veterans of Atlanta, announced Monday.

chairman of the committee governing the department.

New members of important committees were Councilman Orme, finance; Councilman Moore, sewers; Alderman Abbeley, water; Councilman White, parks; Councilman Reynolds, hospitals.

Chairmen of other important committees were named to succeed themselves.

The 1926 council adjourned after passing through only the formalities of a meeting, no organization meeting and without adopting a single measure or without any measures being introduced. It was one of the briefest sessions on record, the mayor's message this year being only about half as long as that of last year.

Urges Government Merger.

Other "high level" among recommendations made by the mayor in his farewell message to council were:

Merger of city and Fulton county governments with deletion of one set of officers for both; a start not later than early spring on the "twin viaducts" over the railroad tracks at avenue and at Pryor street; widening of Peachtree street from North avenue to the northern city boundary line; widening of Edgewood avenue from Boulevard to Hurt, and building of new bathing pools in Piedmont and Candler parks.

Although the oath of office was administered by Mayor Sims to 20 newly-elected members of the 1926 council, the personnel presented only seven new faces.

IMPASSABLE AGAIN!

Telephone advice to The Constitution from Cartersville Monday announced that the main line of the Dixie highway just south of that city is again impassable and that the detour was also impassable, thus making through travel on the main artery in Georgia impossible. And this at a season when more than a thousand automobiles, bringing tourists, home-seekers and prospective investors from the middle west to the southeast, are trying to negotiate this road daily. The same information brought further advice that a great many automobiles held up along the highway between Chattanooga and Atlanta were being shipped to points further south, while the occupants in disgust were boarding the trains that would take them out of Georgia as rapidly as possible.

It is an outrageous situation and one that seriously hurts the state. Not only are the sections traversed by this impassable highway damaged almost without measure, but every county, and every property-owning citizen in Georgia is damaged.

Only a week ago, after the highway department had announced a section of this main artery impassable a little repair work was hastily done and then the announcement broadcast that the highway was open again. It is just as bad today, if not worse, than ever. The cost to the state in prestige, economic losses and in bad advertising will amount to more during the present winter than it would cost to pave with concrete every state highway in the state.

The blame is directly placeable at the door of the state highway department. There is no getting around it, and no sense in trying to dodge responsibility. This section of the highway between Cartersville and Acworth was torn up before material was on the ground for its paving, or making passable in bad weather—an inexcusable blunder. The detour was provided without any thought of its impossibility in bad weather.

Georgia has suffered enough by this sort of thing. The state highway department owes it as much to the citizens in Chatham, or Glynn, or Dougherty or Thomas or Charlton, to put this road into immediate repair as it owes to the citizens of Bartow or Cobb or Fulton.

It is a state issue—it must be met!

LESSONS IN FIGURES.

According to tabulations just made public by Collector Rose, Georgia paid in 1925 more amusement tax than most of the other southern states—and more than double what North Carolina paid, although the latter is leading in education and in road construction.

Georgia paid a far heavier tax on automobile accessories than many of the other southern states, ten times more than Florida, four times more than Louisiana, twice more than Tennessee and almost twice more than Alabama. And yet Georgia today has a state highway condition that is not comparable with either of these states.

There are some striking lessons in the federal tax figures. One is that Georgia is healthy and fully able to take her place at the head of the economic procession. Another is that leading as she does in amusement attendance she should assuredly do more for education. Another is that, leading in automobile ownership she should assuredly do more toward a connected permanent highway system.

It is highly gratifying that the people of Georgia are in such an enviable financial condition. And the per capita taxes paid by North Carolina and Florida illustrate the undisputed economic value to the individual citizen of the best possible schools and the best possible highways.

CONGRESS RECONVENES.
Upon the reconvening of congress Monday after an unusually long holiday recess it became known that President Coolidge had sent for a number of members of both houses to confer as to the possible avoidance of a summer session. He feels, it is said—and no doubt likely—that the members should get back to their states and districts in order to do justice to their respective pre-primary campaigns, many of which are to be held in the late summer, or early in September.

To that end the main purpose now is to fix upon some definite plan by which legislation may be speeded up without any sacrificing of the major issues.

CONGRESS RECONVENES.

Upon the reconvening of congress Monday after an unusually long holiday recess it became known that President Coolidge had sent for a number of members of both houses to confer as to the possible avoidance of a summer session. He feels, it is said—and no doubt likely—that the members should get back to their states and districts in order to do justice to their respective pre-primary campaigns, many of which are to be held in the late summer, or early in September.

To that end the main purpose now is to fix upon some definite plan by which legislation may be speeded up without any sacrificing of the major issues.

It seems assured that the Coolidge budget will be enacted without material changes, and the progress made by the house before the holidays is naturally most encouraging to him.

It is believed that senate leaders are in virtual agreement to adopt the house tax reduction bill without serious changes, although considerable opposition developed at a meeting of the finance committee Monday. Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, ranking democrat on that committee, appears hopeful of rewriting the bill, by first throwing it open to general amendment. He then would form an alliance with the insurgent and western radical elements. It is hoped this will not materialize, as it could only result in a bad political snarl in which the democrats would have everything to lose and nothing to gain. It is believed the administration republicans and conservative democrats will be able to hold in check the Simmons scheme.

The house ways and means committee began consideration Monday of the Mellon-Volpi agreement on the funding of the Italian debt. The committee proposes to bring it to the floor in record time. In the senate the opportunity will be given—always a fear—for a great deal of explosive oratory. It is believed, however, the agreement substantially as made will be ratified.

The world court issue is to transform the senate floor into a political forum, of course, but despite the powerful influences—some secret and with threats of reprisal—there are enough favorable votes in the senate at this hour to pass the resolution pledging membership on the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge basis.

The farm legislative program, or programs—for there are several of them—constitute the most serious threat of deadlock. This is accentuated by a disposition, having politics as the motive, to create alliances between certain farm sections, as between the south and the west, and between the corn belt and the cattle belt. Disaffected groups are being fanned by designing politicians all to the embarrassment of constructive legislation.

It is hoped the southern delegation will stay out of any alliances. The south is opposed to the McNary-Haagen bill. It is opposed to price-fixing, and to any form of paternalism. It is economically progressive but politically conservative.

What puzzles France is that when she thinks she has the Riffs on the run, they are merely retreating to recuperate.

A story is entitled, "New Year's in the Georgia Mountains." (Don't know how the author ever recovered to write it.)

Modesty keeps many from framing the new year resolution and hanging it conspicuously.

The don't-worry clubs are not as numerous as formerly. We wouldn't dignify worry by naming a club for it. Taking one to it might have more effect.

The country could run itself if the soap box orators would give it a fair show.

Doesn't Speak With Authority.
The Thomasville Times-Enterprise hands this one to Dr. Butler:

"Dr. Butler attacks head writers, says they are the sinners of the day by assailing them all in a bunch because they fail to use eminently proper words in the headlines. Do you know just what an extent the writers are put at times to get one that will convey the meaning of the thing in the same way as more than enough or too little space."

Bring us—What? Dread shoals and shifting banks? And calm and bright seas? And clouds and biting gales? And winds and loss? And valiant fighting times? And, Larger Life.

NINE TIMES TOLD MAKES TRUE.

Was greatly surprised, writes a correspondent, who is coy about using the first personal pronoun (now can you guess the correspondent's sex?) to read what you said in the article published November 23, that "the menopause is no change of life." This is the first time I have ever heard such a statement, and I have read articles of the most wonderful physicians that say change of life is a very serious condition and that every woman finds it an ordeal.

At that, some physicians are wonderfully and fearfully benighted with the far-reaching female weakness propaganda. Sometimes one doubts whether the nostrum center with their "change of life" medicine, "strong medicine," "do any more harm than the most potent of trick healers who by hook or crook have acquired the title "doctor," use it unblushingly in the exploitation of feminine credulity.

I am aware that a few women are anxious to know the nature and extent of the "change of life," and I am sure that the commonly held hot flashes at the age of 50, that is an evidence of faulty metabolism, and not of the "change of life," as it is called.

Life. The evidence that his particular trouble is metabolic in origin lies in the relief obtained in most cases when the diet is changed, and the metabolism properly regulated. There is no need of dried method of doing this; it is a matter of common sense and common sense is the woman's own physician.

Again I urge all sensible women who harbor this unwholesome "change of life" obsession to free their minds from such old wives' twaddle, and whenever they experience or fear any health disturbance which they imagine to be due to age or sex, to talk with one about it but submit the matter to their own physicians, say in the course of the interview when they are asked to prepare for the annual health examination.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

New York, January 4.—This talk of New York waiters growing wealthy on the tips they get is not in harmony with the facts. Rumor has it for instance that the head-patron at a fashionable restaurant collects in the neighborhood of $25,000 a year in such gratuities. That would be $500 a week. Still the same individual headed a movement in the waiters' union not long ago to abolish the tipping system. Does it seem reasonable that he would cut off so lucrative a source of income?

Occasionally some gent, confused by looking too often at the bottom of the glass, a procedure that produces dizziness 'tis said, will scatter the dough right and left. He has temporarily lost his sense of proportion.

But even Harry K. Thaw in that wild whirl of his along Zane Lane in company with pretty Fawn Gray did not live up to the reputation given him by the press agents.

It was said that he tipped the waiters with deep necked dollar bills. I asked one of the boys at the Club Cameo and he at once produced a five from his vest pocket. "Here is all I got," he said indignantly. "And I keep it right here to show people that the stories in the papers were all bunk. Though I wished they had been true," he added mournfully.

New York is the world in miniature. It has its bleak and endless streets, its multitudinous corners, its Sahara deserts but its oases as well. There are prospectors digging for gold with the pickaxe.

This, entitled, "We Break New Ground Today," by John Osenham, sounds the real life note for the New Year:

"Each man is Captain of his Soul, And each man his own Crew, But the Pilot knows the Unknown Seas, And He will bring us through."

My Story of Atlanta

BY SAM W. SMALL

After the Georgia convention of 1861 had accepted the secession ordinance and cast the fortunes of the state with the newly formed Confederacy, both public and private interests centered in the preparations for the inevitable war that was to put in jeopardy the fortunes and future of the southern people.

It was not long that there was a formidable company of eminent men in Georgia, a number of the most prominent residents here in Atlanta, who were opposed at least to the disruption of the union and the division of the state into two warring republics, and who under the skin felt sure that the Confederate venture would ultimately fail and the union preserved and peace restored.

These men from the west who have looked upon Coolidge and Jardine as they have discovered the use of agricultural distress. I believe they are right. I think that in this struggle which means more to the farmers of this country than anything that has gone before.

The strategic position of Atlanta as a center of railways radiating to all parts of the south, as nearest to the center geographically of the territory involved in the secession, and one of the most defensible points for the concentration of military conditions and supplies, necessarily made the city an outstanding focus and factor of the war operations.

The people of the city were filled with war fervor. Great public meetings were held here to stimulate the war spirit, and the successful contribution to the success of the southern adventure. Such men as Stephens and Toombs, Howell and Hargrave, and others of the Breckinridge of Kentucky, were brought to the city and addressed huge and enthusiastic war assemblies.

Hold's That If Protection Is Good For Manufacturer, It Is Good For Farmer

Editor Constitution: Are the people of the south alive to the importance of the struggle now taking place between President Coolidge and Secretary of Agriculture Jardine on the one hand, and Governor Hammon, of Iowa; Senator Capper, of Kansas; Dickinson, ex-Governor Lowden and his associates on the other hand?

I have tried to believe that the boll weevil is responsible for the fact that there are one hundred thousand fewer farms in cultivation today in Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina than in 1920. But I am not so sure of this. I reflect that there is no boll weevil in the west, and see that the farmers of Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois are also in dire straits. I see that the farmers in those states today fifty thousand farms less than in 1920. I am, therefore, forced to the conclusion that "boll weevil" is not the cause of the common cause for the depression in agriculture that exists today all over the United States. Not climate alone is the cause of the depression. It is the result of the tariff on the south and west are

POSTAL RECEIPTS RECORDS BROKEN

Postal receipts for 1925 set an all-time record and wrote prosperity of the city in large letters, it was indicated Monday when Edwin K. Large, postmaster, declared that the office here made history in the greatest year ever experienced.

Mr. Large said that December set a record and sent total receipts soaring so that Atlanta will hold her place among other great merchandising centers of the United States and probably push her way even further to the top of the list. For the fiscal year ending July 1, 1925, Atlanta stood twenty-first in the list of offices in receipts.

During the fiscal year 1925 the Atlanta office gained 13.04 per cent, but it was predicted Monday that the gain will be even greater for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1926.

Receipts for the Atlanta office for the first 11 months of 1925 fell only $157,549.15 short of the whole year of 1924, and December of 1925 was the biggest year the Atlanta office has ever had. This means that receipts for the last quarter of 1925 probably exceeded $1,000,000 by a good margin and pushed the year's total past the $4,000,000 mark.

"Postal receipts are regarded as a business barometer," Mr. Large said.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Make Fine Look Younger.

Men and women who used to be called Grandpa and Grandma are now setting the styles by darkening their gray hair at home.

For instance, J. A. McCren, a well known Californian, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture in five minutes that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. Merely take a half pint of water, add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at trifling cost. Apply to the hair twice weekly with a comb. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."—(adv.)

RAIN IS PREDICTED FOR NEXT FEW DAYS

Little hope for immediate relief from the rain which started falling last Saturday week is extended by the local weather bureau, which reported that 33 of an inch precipitation Monday from 7 o'clock in the morning to 7 o'clock at night. According to C. P. von Herrmann, local meteorologist, 1.32 inches of rainfall was registered during the 24-hour period ending at 7 o'clock Monday morning.

"Blue Monday," living up to its name, dawned gray and dreary. Despite the rain, however, the temperature stood at 56 degrees at 7 o'clock Monday morning. This is approximately 51 degrees higher than on the same day one week ago. It was anticipated that the mercury will range between 50 and 60 degrees today.

Much Water in Streets. Gutters in downtown Atlanta were turned into temporary millraces, the storm sewers being taxed to capacity to take care of the excess rainfall. Cellars were reported flooded in various parts of the city.

"In on respect has it reached the flood stage of 40 feet as yet," commented Mr. von Herrmann. "It is predicted that the Flint, Chattahoochee and Apalachicola rivers will all experience a moderate rise during the next few days, without approaching flood stage.

Rains are indicated for the early part of the week for Georgia in general, and the weather probably will be fair thereafter. A brief cold spell is forecast for the middle of the week. Slight rise in temperature is forecast for the northern part of the state.

The rain area Monday extended well over the eastern states. A rather large low pressure area prevailed in the upper Mississippi valley, accompanied by cloudy and rainy weather throughout most of the country, except in the extreme northwest and in Florida. In Alabama and Georgia only did the precipitation exceed more than an inch.

Famous Sleuth Goes Upon Trial For Park Amour

London, January 4.—(By United News.)—Sir Basil Thomson, former head of Scotland Yard and spy-catcher extraordinary during the war, sat in the dock at Marlborough police court Monday and heard the evidence regarding a moonlight, park-bench amour in which he is alleged to have violated decency.

The case, which has excited interest throughout Great Britain, caused wild scenes in the police court. Hundreds of men and women made a rush for places in the tiny courtroom, hoping to see England's modern Sherlock Holmes undergo a grilling. There was a stampede in which the scandal fans trampled, shoved and fought, and a number of newspaper men, and officials were unable to get in. Police riot squads finally quieted the mob from which were selected enough including six specially chosen reporters, to pack the courtroom. The others were ejected.

Sir Basil and his lady were seated under a tree, the witness testified. Two hobbies made the arrest. En route to the station in Hyde Park, Sir Basil revealed his identity and said: "If my friends find out about this I am ruined. If you can overlook this you could leave the police force tomorrow."

The girl in the case who described herself as Verma de Thelma, an actress, already has been convicted and fined and has disappeared.

MONTE CARLO

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

SYNOPSIS. Sir Hargrave Wendever, country gentleman and financier, calls on a famous London physician for examination, and is told he cannot live for more than six or eight months. Wendever takes the blow standing, and decides to go on with his plans for the winter as though nothing had happened. However, feeling the urge to give a lift to some poor fellow creature, he experiments on those with whom he comes in contact, until he finds one who is in need of help. This proves to be a delicate-looking miniature girl who serves him regularly. He offers Violet Martin, a member of her family a vacation at Monte Carlo. She persuades her fiancé, Robert, to act as her brother and they tell Sir Hargrave they will go. In Monte Carlo their host tells them they are free to do as they please, gives them plenty of spending money, and places a car at their disposal. Hargrave renews his acquaintance with the charming Princess Stephanie Putrika, who is in love with him, but he finds himself falling in love with Violet.

INSTALLMENT XX.

CRASH!

Violet was silent, but the look she flashed across the table brought Hargrave a moment's disquietude. And yet, after all, he asked himself, as he looked beyond her high up to the snows, what did it matter? He had come here with the deliberate intention of taking his dose of the best there was in life. Why deny himself the crumbs of her offering? Day by day he realized that she was becoming to him the center of all his emotions. The rest of the people, excepting only Stephanie, were puppets, creatures made to play with and forget, to amuse, if they could, the passing months of a dying man. But happiness! Why not a month or more of it? After all, the path to the end was only relatively short or long. He could compensate, he could leave her wealth, a name. Why deny himself?

"What do you see away there in the distance?" she asked him abruptly.

The rush of his thoughts was checked. He laughed a little uneasily, and helped himself to wine.

"I see a shadow falling upon the mountains, child," he said, "a blue mist turning to gray. It means we must finish our lunch and hurry downward."

"The wonderful things are finished so soon," she sighed.

He wrapped her cloak around her, and they drove off. She leaned back by his side with a little sigh of content as they glided away from the clubhouse. The demon of his disquietude leaped out again. He watched her long, capable fingers, lying for a moment unengaged upon the rug, and wondered whether she had left them there on purpose. Never once had he held them. He glanced at her lips, full and soft and sweet, and thought for a moment of the miracle of the one unforgettable kiss he knew so well was there for the asking, watched her slim body as she leaned forward and then back again in her place. Suddenly he found her watching him. She smiled.

"Forgive me," she begged. "Today you look so natural. You seem so much more like yourself. Since we have been out here, is it my fancy, or have you been just a little school masterish with me? I don't know why. I don't want you to be like that."

He swung round the corner to the second facet. He had been driving, perhaps, a little faster than usual, and his foot sought the brake. There was no response. The car was gathering speed. He reached for the hand brake. Then he knew the worst.

"What's happened, Johnson?" he asked, without turning his head. The man leaned over from the dicky.

"I wanted to ask you when you got in, Sir Hargrave, to let me try the brakes, only you were off so soon," he replied. "I don't understand. They were all right when we came up."

They swung round a corner on two wheels. A foot from them on the right was a sheer drop of many hundreds of feet. They were racing now down a long incline. Hargrave bent over the wheel.

"I'm sorry," he muttered. "I'm afraid we shall have a bit of a smash. I'll do the best I can."

"I'm not afraid," she whispered softly.

At the bottom of the descent was a peasant's farmhouse, built of stone and flush with the road. He drove toward it, steered to an inch so that the wing brushed hard against the masonry, turned with that first check a little further in, still so that the whole of one side of the car, shattering and crashing along the front of the house, was nevertheless subjected to the brake of its contact. They came almost to a standstill swung around, crashed sideways into a wooden gate, and with their impetus lessened knocked only a stone or two with their rear wheels off the wall which overhung the precipice.

"Jump, dear!" he cried quickly.

As another stone began to loosen she came fearlessly into his arms. Johnson was on his feet by now and a huge boulder was rolled behind the wheels just in time. Hargrave drew himself up.

"Well, we're out of that!" he exclaimed.

Violet, very slowly, very reluctantly, drew away from Hargrave's grasp. He still held both her hands in his. On the whole the moment had his compensations. A car came rushing up the hill. The omnibus which had been behind them was already pulling up. Johnson crawled out from underneath the car.

"What I want to know, sir, is who's been tampering with my brakes?" he said fiercely. "It's been done on purpose!"

Hargrave was puzzled.

"They were certainly in perfect order when we came up," he declared.

The chauffeur pointed under the car.

"The nuts have all been withdrawn from both bolts, sir," he announced. "It was a put-up job. No accident unscrewed a dozen nuts."

They were by this time surrounded. Hargrave handed Violet into the bus and took his place by her side.

"You had better go up in the other car, Johnson," he directed, "and make inquiries. See if any strangers were loitering about, and tell Mr. Dickson, the secretary, just what's happened. Don't talk about it to anyone else."

"Very good, Sir Hargrave."

The bus fortunately was empty. Violet sat with her arm tightly through her companion's.

"Did your chauffeur think that someone had done this on purpose?" she asked.

"Well, it seems absurd," he replied. "Still, there you are. Brakes don't go like that all of their own accord."

"But who could have done it?" she demanded wonderingly. "You haven't any enemies, have you?"

"Well, I wouldn't go so far as to say that, but who could have known I was lunching at La Turbie?"

Violet reflected for a moment.

"Well, Robert knew," she remarked. "He may have told Mr. Hobson."

"And who may he be?"

"He's an American journalist," she explained. "I've seen him talking to the Marchesa di Benti."

Hargrave was silent for a moment. His face had grown stern.

"What makes you think Robert might have told him?" he asked.

She indulged in a little grimace.

"Well, just something that the marchesa said. I heard her tell Robert that Hobson was making his living by reporting the doings of well-known people here, and she asked him whenever he had a chance to let him know where you were lunching or dining. That didn't matter, did it?"

"What could matter," he answered lightly, "so long as we are here and safe? All the same, perhaps you had better warn Robert to be careful. Mr. Hobson is not quite the sort of journalist I care for."

"Will you tell me, if you please," the woman begged who sat by Pellingham's side at dinner in the princess' wonderful villa, "just who may be this Englishman, Sir Hargrave Wendever, and why is he host tonight?"

Pellingham glanced furtively at the small card which lay by the side of his place.

"You did not hear my name, perhaps," his companion continued. "It is not strange, for Stephanie was indistinct this evening. I am the Comtesse Fedora Fayaldi. There is more, but I spare it to you. I am either Hungarian or Polish, whichever you will, for my husband owned estates in both countries, and I arrived here tonight. I stay with my friend the princess and at dinner—it is a most interesting party, this, is it not?—I find as host a distinguished-looking man, but a stranger."

"Sir Hargrave Wendever is his name," Pellingham confided. "He is a pal of mine, an Englishman of great wealth, and very popular upon the Riviera. It was rather a surprise to me to find him playing the part of host, but I know that the princess' cousin, the grand duke, sent his excuses at the last moment. That's why Wendever brought me along, to make the numbers right. I only arrived this afternoon."

"Tell me about this man," the comtesse begged.

Folly Roadway Company

First Mortgage (Closed) Sinking Fund 7% Gold Bonds

Dated January 1, 1926

Due January 1, 1941

Coupon bonds in denominations of $1,000 and $500, registerable as to principal only. Principal and semi-annual interest (January 1st and July 1st) payable at any office of the Citizens and Southern Company or at the Bank of Charleston, N. B. A. Redeemable as a whole or in part at the option of the Company upon thirty days' notice at 103 1/4 and interest. Interest payable without deduction for Normal Federal Income Tax up to two per cent.

The Citizens and Southern Bank,
Bank of Charleston, N. B. A., Co-Trustees.

THE COMPANY:

The Folly Roadway Company operating under a 20-year franchise granted by the Legislature of the State of South Carolina owns and controls the toll road leading to Folly Island. The natural beauty of Folly Island with its seven miles of unbroken beach and its elevated building lots, both on the ocean and river, give to the above franchise a very permanent and definite value. Further, the marked accessibility of Folly Island, it being only twenty-five minutes by automobile from Charleston and only a few hours drive over good roads from cities such as Columbia, Florence, Sumter and Manning in South Carolina and from Augusta and other points in Georgia, assures the heavy use of the conditioned toll road by the many classes of people living in the immediate and adjacent territory. The franchise extends two years beyond the fixed maturity of this issue.

SECURITY:

This issue is a first mortgage upon all property of the Folly Roadway Company and a first lien upon the tolls received over the road. In addition it is secured by a pledge of all the property of the Folly Beach Improvement Company, which latter Company owns seven-tenths of the property on Folly Island. While there has been a road to Folly Island for about five years, its poor condition has greatly retarded the development of the Island. But there has been development and today there are over a hundred homes on Folly Island, many of which are owned by substantial citizens of Charleston and other cities in South Carolina. From the proceeds of this issue new bridges and a vastly improved road will be built and every effort expended to expedite a healthy and sensible development at Folly Island. After this financing the security behind this issue is itemized as follows:

Property owned by the Folly Roadway Company and mortgaged under this issue.....	$ 300,000.00
Property of Folly Beach Improvement Company pledged under mortgage of this issue.....	1,000,000.00
TOTAL .....	$1,300,000.00

It can be readily seen there is a security of more than three for one, or over $3,000.00 for every $1,000.00 bond issued.

INCOME:

The income applicable to the service of this issue is derived first from the tolls, and secondly from the sale of real estate held by Folly Beach Improvement Company. A total of $40,000 in tolls was received last year, or over one and one-half times the interest charges of this issue; but it must be remembered that these tolls were paid over a poor road, and it is believed that over the new road this item of revenue will be greatly increased. By agreement in reference to real estate sales described under sinking fund paragraph a large source of revenue will be established. With these two powerful sources of income it is probable that this issue will have been liquidated in advance of the fixed maturity.

SINKING FUND:

The indenture provides for an annual sinking fund which will be created and maintained in two ways:

1. All money derived from tolls over and above interest and maintenance charges will be applicable to the sinking fund.
2. Under a release agreement, out of the proceeds from any sale of real estate held by the Folly Beach Improvement Company 70% of such proceeds is payable into the sinking fund of this issue.

Under these provisions an active market should be assured for this issue, for it is the intention of the Folly Roadway Company to buy bonds annually for the sinking fund in the open market and if not so obtainable to call by lot.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE:

All the proceeds of this issue will be used in the construction of new bridges on the roadway, in improving and constructing a first class roadway from the toll gate to Folly Island, and in paving and betterment of the streets and conditions on Folly Island.

MANAGEMENT:

The Folly Roadway Company and the Folly Beach Improvement Company will be under the direct supervision of the Citizens and Southern Company during the life of these bonds.

All legal matters incident to this financing have been passed upon and approved by Messrs. Hagood, Rivers and Young of Charleston, South Carolina, and Messrs. Adams and Adams of Savannah, Georgia.

New York, January 4.—(AP)—The new year started with an advance of between $1.50 and $2 per bale in the cotton market today. Buying on an optimistic view of the general business outlook was evidently encouraged by relatively firm Liverpool cables. Near months also were influenced by rumors that shipments were pending out of the local stock. March contracts sold up to 20.12, a net advance of 36 points, and closed at 20.03, the general market closing barely steady, but from 20 to 36 points net higher.

The market opened firm at an advance of 17 to 24 points in response to the Liverpool strength. Houses with Liverpool connections were good buyers here. There also was covering by both trade and speculative shorts, and it seemed fresh commission house demand was coming into the market. The volume of business tapered off after the close at Liverpool, and the advance was checked by realizing together with a little selling for southern account.

These offerings were absorbed in reactions of 8 or 10 points, however, and the market firmed up again during the afternoon, reaching the highest prices of the day in late trading. January advanced to 20.25, May to 19.70 and July to 19.22, net advances of 36 to 43 points on the old crop positions, while October, selling at 19.53, was 31 points net higher.

The first business in December, 1925, deliveries was reported today at prices ranging from 18.37 up to 18.50. Foreign trade interests were credited with buying near crop months, and while the demand showed a tendency to slacken above the 20-cent level for March, comparatively little selling pressure developed aside from realizing. The supply view of general prospects was promoted by the action of grain and stock markets and some buying of cotton was reported by both Wall Street and western interests.

The New York warehouse stock showed a slight decrease, which tended to color rumors that about 25,000 bales of the cotton taken up on January contracts would be exported. Port receipts, 38,102; United States port stocks, 1,043,653, exports 17,850, making 4,721,753 so far this season.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.
New York, January 4.—(AP)—Spot cotton steady; middling 20.85.

NEAR MONTHS GAIN
36 TO 39 POINTS IN PRICE.

New Orleans, January 4.—(AP)—Cotton started the new year today with a fairly firm market. Prices were higher from the start and although there were reactions from time to time on realizing the trend was upward.

Following a higher start with gains of 19 to 28 points, due to favorable Liverpool cables, the market continued to gain until in the late trading active near months showed gains of 36 to 39 points. There was a sudden dip right at the end on realizing of 7 to 10 points and the close showed net gains for the day of 27 to 34 points except for October which gained only 17 points. The strength of near months, particularly January and March, was the main stimulating influence.

The long end of these months is said to be in strong hands, mainly large spot interests and there is a considerable short interest in them still uncovered. The comparative weakness of the late months, particularly October, was due to switching from the near to the distant positions involving the selling of October.

At the start prices showed gains of 19 to 28 points but prices eased off slightly right after the call, January trading down to 19.92, March to 19.40, and May to 19.00, or 2 to 10 points under the opening. These prices proved to be the lows of the day.

The market soon rallied and prices kept on the up-grade all day except for trifling reactions from time to time, until in the late trading January traded to 20.12, March at 19.61 and May at 19.10 or 36 to 39 points above the previous close. From these high points prices eased off 7 to 10 points on realizing and October made a new low at 17.51 right at the end. Exports for the day totaled 17,853 bales. Galveston exported 99,622 bales on Friday while the market was closed.

SPOTS IN NEW ORLEANS.
New Orleans, January 4.—(AP)—Spot cotton closed quiet and steady, 30 points up. Sales, 228. Low middling, 21.30; middling, 20.30; good middling, 21.30. Receipts, 7,333; stock, 511,410.

High Lights in the Cotton Market

BY THEO H. PRICE
Editor of Commerce and Finance

New York, January 4.—The open sea of 1926 upon which the cotton market emerges with the commencement of the new year is uncharted, but it looks smooth, and it is at least reassuring to know that it will not be troubled by any government estimates until mid-summer.

The size of the American crop is no longer in doubt. The supply from other countries can be closely approximated, and about the only unknown quantity in the price equation is the demand. An exact determination of this factor is not practicable, but all the available information indicates that the consumption will be the largest on record. Spinners' takings of American cotton up to December 25 are in excess of any previous season, and although there has been some slackening in exports of late, it is expected that the movement will soon pick up again.

It seems probable that the commercial crop, which includes linters, will be about 16,600,000 bales, and the indications are that so much of this supply will be absorbed that the carryover at the end of the season will not be burdensome or abnormal.

An appreciation of these facts and probabilities was reflected in the steadiness of last week's market, and barring some unlooked-for development, any recession in prices seems unlikely. But on the other hand there is nothing presently in sight to cause a sensational advance. The south appears to be willing to sell the cotton it has left on a 20-cent basis, and as the goods market is pretty well adjusted to that price, it may be truthfully said that the minds of buyers and sellers have met, and that comparative stability is the result of the meeting.

But this stability will not last long if there are any developments that suggest a decrease in the production for 1926-27, and for that reason the outlook for the new crop should be watched. Although planting will commence in southern Texas about the 15th of February it is, of course, too early to make even a guess at the probability.

It is, however, worth noting that some of the farmers' associations are already organizing to secure a reduction in acreage, and although it is the fashion to disparage such efforts they should not be ignored.

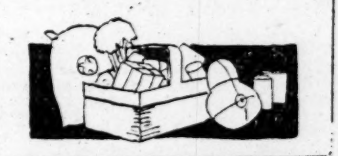

For it is a fact that an insufficient crop next year would spell disaster to southern agriculture as well as to the cotton textile industry all over the world. It would put cotton to a price that would overstimulate production in 1927-28, and it would paralyze the world's equipment of spindles and looms that must run day and night to earn their keep and show a fair return upon their cost. That they could use up even 18 or 20 million bales of American cotton if so much was available and the goods produced were marketable at a profit is undoubtedly true, and with the widespread improvement in trade now reported it is quite possible that the consumption may increase more rapidly than seems possible to some. For no one can set a limit to the economic progress of a world at peace and at work.

In December, 1904, cotton sold at less than 6 1/2 cents because the crop was estimated at about 12,000,000 bales. Now such a yield would spell famine and if the war had not halved the normal growth of the world's consumption a yield of 20,000,000 bales of American cotton would be none too large today.

That normalcy will be speedily re-achieved now seems certain, and with its reachievement it will be a long time before the United States can produce too much cotton.

MONEY AT WORK

REAL WAGES ARE NOT MONEY BUT CONSIST OF BUYING POWER

A man's wages are not measured in money. They are payment in the form of goods; food, clothing, shelter and luxuries.

Most men believe they work for money. They measure their job in terms of the money it pays them.

That money is spent for food, clothing, shelter or luxuries. In the last analysis they are working for goods, not money.

A man's wages might be doubled, yet if his cost of living doubled, too, he would be no better off than before, so his real wages remain the same.

Real wages are not the amount of money a man finds in his pay envelope. They are whatever he can buy with that money.

Following the record-breaking business of Christmas, the total is said to be an increase of $12,027,400, more than the same day in 1925, and nearly $3,000,000 more than the same days in 1924 and 1925.

$50,000,000 INVOLVED IN STEEL COMBINATION

New York, January 4.—(AP)—Approximately $50,000,000 will be involved in financing the German steel combination, which represents the latest undertaking of Clarence Dillon, head of the banking firm of Dillon, Read and company, it was reported today.

The deal, which is under negotiation, will cement the existing union between the "big three" group of German steel companies—the Deutsche, the Gelsenkirchner and the Bochumer Verein—which, with the Siemens and Halske companies, make up the Rhine Elbe union.

Confirming the announcement that a merger was in prospect, members of Dillon, Read and company said today that the combination had been under consideration and discussion in Germany for some time and that permanent financing of substantial size for these companies had been discussed.
